Ashley advises and advocates for clients in the health sector.

Ashley provides advice to health organizations on a wide range of issues including risk management, policy, and regulatory compliance. In her litigation practice, she has experience representing health organizations, nurses, allied health professionals, and veterinarians in complex medical malpractice and professional regulation matters.

Prior to practicing law, Ashley obtained her Master of Science in Global Health, and developed an interdisciplinary background in health policy and risk management through work with health organizations.

Ashley joined BLG after working at a boutique litigation firm where she represented plaintiffs in complex medical malpractice lawsuits. She also worked in in-house and private practice settings on behalf of dentists and physicians.
